Fall Forward

November 2014

Over the next week, the Brandeis Center is rolling out three new Law Student Chapters in New York, Minneapolis, and St. Paul. The growth of LDB Law School Chapters has been an encouraging response to resurgent campus anti-Semitism. Also in the November Brief, find information on the progress of our Higher Education Initiative, Brackman on Dutch Jewry, progress in California, and important new appointments at the Brandeis Center.

The LDB Urges Congress to End or Mend Middle East Studies Funding

The Brandeis Center recently issued a public policy White Paper on "The Morass of Middle East Studies: Title VI of the Higher Education Act and Federally Funded Area Studies" to address shortcomings in Title VI of the Higher Education Act. LDB is particularly concerned about biased, politicized, anti-Israel and anti-American programming at Title VI Centers that violate both the letter and spirit of 2008 congressional reforms. Many Title VI recipients were ideologically polarized institutions notorious for one-sided approaches hostile to the United States, the West, and Israel. Some programs were reportedly so hostile towards Israel that they would not even remotely entertain views that contradicted their unrelentingly anti-Israel perspective.

Triangulating Dutch Jewry's Downfall

Harold Brackman, Brandeis Blog

The Hague's Van Ostade Housing Project—once part of a traditional Jewish neighborhood—now belongs to a transformed Schilderswijk which the Dutch increasingly know as the "Sharia Triangle." There aren't enough Jews left to form a minyan. But Frabrice Shomberg, an artist born in England, stubbornly continues to make "kippah walks" and build a Sukkah as a marker of his Dutch neighborhood's Jewish past.
